

Letters to the Editor

Dear Lucid dreamers,

I think what if... LUCID DREAMS are the containers of the great secret to the question mankind has been asking since the revelation of mortality:

is there a part of us that lives on beyond the death of the body?

what if the answer has been told us a million times in lucid dreams and out—of—body experi-ences... we can and do leave the body——some nameless part flies around and watches, people who come back from being considered clinically dead tell us it is so. What if our present lucid dream research provides us a way to communicate while in this state after the body is gone by using some thought wave rather than the foot or eye blink. We will kick ourselves for being so dense as to have spent all these milieu looking at rocks, germs, atoms and space when the answer was in our very bed nests, 90 minutes into sleep just a REM away.

While all the high paid technologists and scientists are probing you and I humble dream explorers may be on the verge of reaching the Moon of the Unconscious. I see that thought waves can now operate computer prosthesis contraptions... what are we waiting for why are the sleep labs still using body signals?

Good luck,

Ananda
