Conclusions

- Chemical sets of concentration curves tend to group by their MOA clusters, but there is room for improvement.
- The performance is probably affected by the range of the concentrations used in the in-vitro experiments for each toxicant.
- SOMs are a useful tool for visualising high dimensional data, but require a lot of parameter tuning.

References